

WHAT IS EXECUTIVE GOLD?

A political scientist and author has said the Federal Senior Executive Service "may be the most elite group of individuals you'll find anywhere." SEA's 3,000 members hold key Federal government positions, representing a very broad spectrum of skills and responsibilities.

They are Directors of Budgeting, of Acquisition Reform, of Human Resource Management, of Information Resources Management, and of Research and Development. They are Deputy Inspectors General, Chief Financial Officers, and Deputy Assistant Secretaries.

They are members of the Senior Executive Service and of equivalent pay systems, such as Senior Level and Senior Professional and Scientific. Some are internationally recognized experts in their fields.

Of the career executives who are currently members of the Association, over 200 have received the nation's highest civil service award, the Presidential Rank of Distinguished Executive. Over 700 have received the Presidential Rank of Meritorious Executive.

SEA members reside in every state in the country, and some are posted overseas. They represent the full spectrum of Federal departments and agencies and constitute a substantial segment of many agencies' executive corps.

WHAT IS THE SENIOR EXECUTIVES ASSOCIATION?

Whether they direct the FBI agents who investigate terrorist activity, the NASA astronauts who pilot the space shuttle, or the research scientists who inch closer each day to a cure for cancer, the members of the Senior Executives Association provide the leadership and expertise to manage the government's departments and agencies.

The Senior Executives Association (SEA) was founded in 1980 as a tax-exempt, nonprofit corporation representing the interests of career Federal executives. Our membership is committed to effective, efficient and productive leadership in government. SEA seeks to ensure equitable treatment and compensation, continuing professional education, and recognition for the more than 6,000 career Federal executives who comprise the nation's highest civil service ranks.

SEA engages in active lobbying with Congress and Executive Branch officials, provides information to the media and the public, and, through its Professional Development League, sponsors professional development, recognition and research activities. Since its inception, SEA has maintained a strict bipartisan posture.

"I congratulate you for your continuing efforts to recognize the outstanding executives who are key to the government's ability to meet standards of excellence."

Thomas Conabino, Former Administrator
Drug Enforcement Administration
Department of Justice
